

Our History Book

To The Graduating Class of 2010:
What we've done and where we've been throughout our years of education have helped to sculpt and mold the people we are today. The yearbook theme this year, "Our History Book," will reflect every aspect of our high school career. Later on in life, while we have reached our milestones and achieved our wildest goals, we will be able to look back and reflect upon the events which shaped our greatest memories and linked our strongest bonds. We will remember the laughs and the excitement and we will be able to regain a happiness that was so immensely treasured during our high school experience.

Class History

Glancing back at the building that held us hostage for the past four years, we recall our very first footsteps through the front doors. The same doors that ended a senior run and our trail of enjoyment of freedom and departure, once held a sense of security and entry. These walls that enclosed us from an outside world, now open us to the adults we shall become. The people we have met, friendships made, and mistakes encountered, leave us all with enough memories to fill the books within the library.

Take yourself back to the beginning when this building stood as a frightening, new experience and visions of "big bad seniors" panted through our minds. School buses were the popular way of travel and our freshman hallway was the only corridor holding familiar faces. Our class awkwardly distinctive with the young baby faces of all of the boys, dressed in their mothers new purchased "first day of school outfits", and cheap preteen cologne; while girls excitedly grouped with close friends to giggle over attractive upperclassmen, often visiting the bathroom to reapply our 50 cent lip gloss, and gossiping over unnecessary drama. Soon enough we colored the white halls with laughter and ease and before the blink of an eye, spirit week approached. Our class was led by president Nate Goldstein, vice president Mariah Brunelle, treasurer Genna Difabbio, and secretary Danii Gale, alongside the advising of Mrs. Dennis and Mrs. Coler. With a great amount of dedication, our spirit week posters were pitiful at best and homecoming gave us a return of stomach butterflies as we attended our very first high school dance. The winter ball in December didn't have nearly as much success and all that attended received an X rated show on the dance floor (which I assume to be the reason for the absence of its occurrence ever since). As snow slowly melted and St. Patrick's Day disembarked, everyone could enjoy the tradition of Mr. Cleary dressed as a leprechaun. We watched seniors clamor throughout the hallways as do stampedes of animals, and I remember thinking how far away that day would be for us.

We returned the next fall more confident than the last, with one year of experience behind ourselves. A new set of lockers and younger students made our juvenile minds believe we were highly mature. We pressed forward with the original four class officers and newly added advisor, Melissa Newman, who gave us a blunt opinion on how rather tasteless the Harry Potter themed posters appeared. The sophomore class of 2010 became highly participated in spirit week themes of sporting the color orange and homecoming gave every girl a chance for their unrequited crush to notice them. Spring brought a new marked event, talk of Ring Dance gathered quickly and the stress of dates, hair appointments, and a semi-formal style of dress built and seemed to be the only topic of discussion. The color stone chosen by every boy and girl for the class ring varied from black onyx to sun fire orange and were engraved with names as well as choices of hobbies. If only, we could return to those moments to assure ourselves that these details were so minor.

Junior year met our high school career to a midpoint and this was at last uplifting. Many new drivers traded in a seat on the school bus for a spot in the student parking lot. Wranglers, minivans, and sporty little coups occupied the parking lot for the first time and everyone was chased and nearly threatened to buy parking permits. Changes were finally made as Sam Johnson became president, Mariah Brunelle remained vice president, Genna Difabbio held her position as treasurer, and Alex Lamphier newly sat as secretary. The seniors most definitely rigged the spirit week totals and our 129 class truthfully should have been victorious between Shawna Felzmann's homemade Monster's Ink costume and Stacey Belcher's yearly worn Spiderman suit. Unfortunately, Hawk News lost a valid segment of their show entitled "Mitchel's Moments" however we were treated with weekly weather from very comical Ali Zaidi. With prom nearly two months away, every girl began to panic about dress shopping during the first week of March as all of the guys dreaded the night requiring photo shoots, wearing uncomfortable tuxedos, and paying for all of the girl's expenses. Every color under the horizon was present in dress patterns and everyone looked lovely. Elegantly dressed Maggie Munnelly was announced as queen and Italian stallion, Vinny Costanzo was crowned king. Professional photos taken by a spiral staircase and a DJ that enjoyed playing teen favorites from the 1970's are memorable moments from our junior prom. Summer certainly took it's time arriving as we were more than anxious to officially be known as the oldest in the school.

The end of August welcomed us back to the school as seniors and there was an undeniable feel of excitement in the air. The newly polished and waxed floors suggested a fresh start to the year and teacher's handed out textbooks for the last time. Being the rather unusual class that we are, we managed a practice senior run within the first few months of the year. Senior class officers were Alex Lamphier as president, Jen Healy as vice president, Genna Difabbio as treasurer, and Danii Gale as secretary. School spirit reached an all time high for the pep rally with a donut eating contest and dizzy bat. Students voted for their favorite nominee in the homecoming court but Kelsey Hayes clenched the title of homecoming queen and Chris Emswiler received the title of king. The senior trip to Disney World sent everyone in a magical mood even on the returning flight, encouraging the other passengers to put their hands in the air as if we were on a roller coaster. Our class became extremely close the last month of school and prom was just one of the many group events that took place. Prom queen, Aubrey Gauthier looked stunning in her gown and king, Kyle Pultz was a gentleman with mustache and cane. We were highly fortunate to have a cloudless day in Connecticut at High Meadows for our class trip, where I believe that the Bellingham girls proved to be even stronger than the football team.

These past four years are enriched with memories, some of which are far too precious to be captured through words. High school though we sometimes dreaded every moment, will always hold a place in our hearts. As we move on from here to the next step in our lives, wherever that may be, take everything with you. Look up to the sky, open with endless amount of opportunity and watch that cap soar high. Reminisce on these memories time and time again, congratulations class of 2010.

Valedictorian Speech 2010

Amanda Merrill

Good evening and welcome family, friends, graduates, and esteemed faculty of Bellingham High School. Today marks the completion of thirteen years of formal schooling. Today, we celebrate the graduation of the Class of 2010. Congratulations Blackhawks; we did it!

At this time, I would like to offer a special thanks to the faculty and administration that made this scholastic journey possible. To Mr. Fischer, our school's superintendent, Mr. Fleury, our principal, and Mr. Forbes, our vice-principal, who provided us with a welcoming and supportive learning environment and to those educators who established a challenging curriculum that expanded our intellectual horizons and taught us how to really think. I would also like to thank Mrs. Dennis and Ms. Newman, our class advisors, who have dedicated so much time and effort to make our high school years memorable. We will forever be indebted to each and every one of you for all that you have done in preparing us for the future and guiding us on our various life paths.

More importantly, I would like to offer my sincere gratitude to the parents whose love and support nurtured us to reach our greatest potential; to those family members who stood behind us all those years and built us up to who we are today. We do not thank them enough but it is through their dedication to us that we succeeded.

And now, to my fellow graduates, I would like to offer some wisdom for life. There is an old Quaker proverb that states, "Let your life speak." These four words, although short, express a vital life lesson: listen to your heart. Do not let the societal pressures or the influences of others affect who you are and who you are meant to become. Graduates, if you take one thing from this speech, always remember to let your life speak. Listen to what it says about your future and what you were destined to be. It is a common fault to get too caught up in what one is supposed to become, what the best, most profitable profession is or which way is correct or logical. The true pathway to success, happiness, and fulfillment in life, however, is to not do what one thinks is expected, but to open one's mind to the confines of their heart; to pay attention to the signs of one's inner self and to pursue the calling being made. Always remember that if a decision comes from your heart, it can never, ever be wrong. The key to inner peace and happiness is setting your own goals and reaching for your dreams; not succumbing to the will of others or striving to live up to someone else's expectations.

Fellow classmates, after you leave the walls of Bellingham High School, make a point to find a quiet, comfortable place in which to think. Sit down and clear your head. Let your values speak to you and invite your passions to control your thoughts. Once you truly let go of all your previous conceptions of what your life should embody, you will discover what your life was meant to embody.

Class of 2010, one must stand apart from the crowd to make a difference; change never evolves out of monotony. When a girl shops for a prom dress, she never decides on the same dress as all of her friends. When Americans are voting for their next idol, they never choose the singer that sounds like all the rest. Girls always purchase the one-of-a-kind dress and people always pick the artist with the most unique vocals. Likewise, fellow graduates, you must be that one-of-a-kind dress, that unique artist. In life, it is not important the education you receive or the gifts with which you are endowed. Contrarily, what is important is the time and effort you invest and how you develop your gifts. What matters is that you let your aptitudes and talents articulate for themselves. You must take what you have been given and utilize it in a way in which no one else has. It is how you take advantage of your opportunities that will allow you to achieve greatness and how steadfast you remain that will allow you to leave your mark on the world.

Therefore, Class of 2010, I urge you, do not just let your life speak; but let it shout your beliefs and sing about your passions. Never try to be something or someone you are not and never attempt to quiet the fire burning within you. You all have the potential to achieve astounding accomplishments. It is through your dedication and persistence that you are sitting here with me today and it is this same ardor and diligence that will allow you to transform the future of the world.

Fellow senior classmates, earlier you walked through the doors of Bellingham High School as students. Soon, you will walk through, diploma in hand, as graduates. You may never enter this building again and you may never again encounter a single face you see around you now. Regardless, all of us share a bond; and one that will never be broken: we are Bellingham High School's Class of 2010. Congratulations graduates and I wish you only the best of luck in finding yourself and succeeding in all of your future endeavors. Let your life speak...and listen!

Salutatorian Speech 2010

Jennifer Healy

Hello, everyone. I would first like to thank all of you for being here today, to share with us our high school graduation. And, while this day is probably one of the most significant in our lives thus far, what it represents means so much more. This day, this ceremony, is just like any other graduation ceremony; Pomp and Circumstance was played, everyone is sweating in their caps and gowns, and we all filed in together (which is really quite impressive considering that our graduation practices this past week more closely resembled a scene from Dawn of the Dead than anything else). But all these things are also happening right now a few towns over. So why is this graduation so special? Because this ceremony, just like this school and the past four years, is defined and made significant by the people involved.

This gymnasium, looks like any other gymnasium. But this one, is where many of us were involuntarily taught to square dance by Mr. Costa. Where many suffered through Mr. Mac's grueling track practices. Where our basketball teams chest bumped, high-fived, and cheered each other on during countless games. And where the Class of 2010 put on one awesome pep rally.

The auditorium down the hall...has seats, and a stage. Nothing out of the norm. But that auditorium is where we all felt a little bit closer and more fortunate after watching Rachel's Challenge. That auditorium, is where so many of our classmates received honors at the MICCA Music Festival. That auditorium, is where our fist-pumping Jersey Shore talent show judges stole the show. And that auditorium was able to stand the heat when our NHS Fashion Show models strutted their stuff for a good cause.

The athletic fields outside aren't anything special, except for the fact that none of us will forget those fields. Because those fields are where Tara Daniels returned to kick off the girls' soccer senior night (which we won, by the way). And where Steve Hole, Key Perry, and CC Rogers tormented pitchers every time they got up to bat. Those fields are where Alex Pacak and Jay Lacasse held the line for a small but tough football team, and where Kayla Kelly defended the goal for our powerhouse of a field hockey squad.

The hallways all around us – I do have to say it: nerf guns – but anyway, these hallways are where the amazing artwork of Genna Bruni, Alexa Friend, and Jimmy Walker is displayed. These hallways are where Holiday cheer was spread every winter by Senora McDonald's caroling Spanish classes. Muchisimas gracias, Senora. And these hallways are where we ran, rolled, and screamed on our last day as high school seniors.

The classrooms, just like any others, are good for learning and occasional napping. But our classrooms are where Amanda Merrill set the academic bar so high for all of us. So ridiculously high, Amanda. Our classrooms are where a certain Senior Class Officer or two, Genna, suffered through the worst case of senioritis ever. But, it was also in our classrooms where we, under the organization of Stacey Belcher and Bigg Mac, found the cure for senioritis which, as it turns out, is prank week; never have we been more focused and productive than we were while pranking classrooms that night. It was really quite the spectacle.

We look like any other senior class. But weren't we the ones who were able to appreciate all of Mr. Fleury's stories? Wasn't it Maggie Munnely and Kristin Martinis, two members of our class, who won a lip sync competition on the class trip? Weren't our days brightened by the smiles of Vinny Costanzo and Laura Norton for four years, and especially after the mock crash? And didn't we stand up and cheer for Dr. Kyle Pultz when he won Prom King? I could go on for hours, the point is, it was us.

These are memories that we'll call on when we reminisce about high school. Not because our gym or auditorium is better than anyone else's. Not because there's something magical about our hallways or classrooms. And not because grass on our athletic fields is any greener than the surrounding towns'. No, that's not what makes them special. It's because these memories were made in our school, by our class, and that makes them our memories. And while this ceremony is running smoothly and everyone looks great, it is the people sitting all around us that make it as special as it is.

So I would like to take this opportunity to express my deepest gratitude to all of you, because these memories wouldn't have been remotely the same if shared with a less incredible group of people, and I would also like to express how grateful I am to be able to say congrats Class of 2010, we've done everything we need to do here, time to rock the rest of the world (I'm sure you will). Thank you.

Senior Class Song

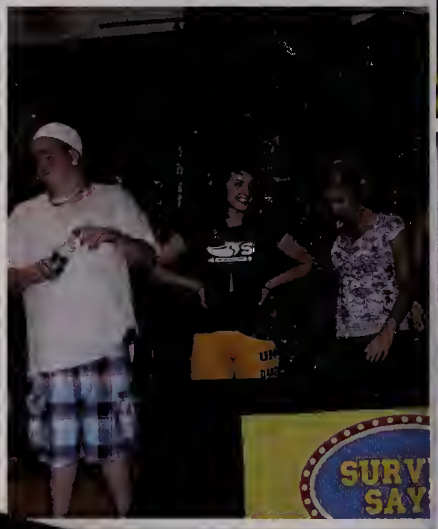

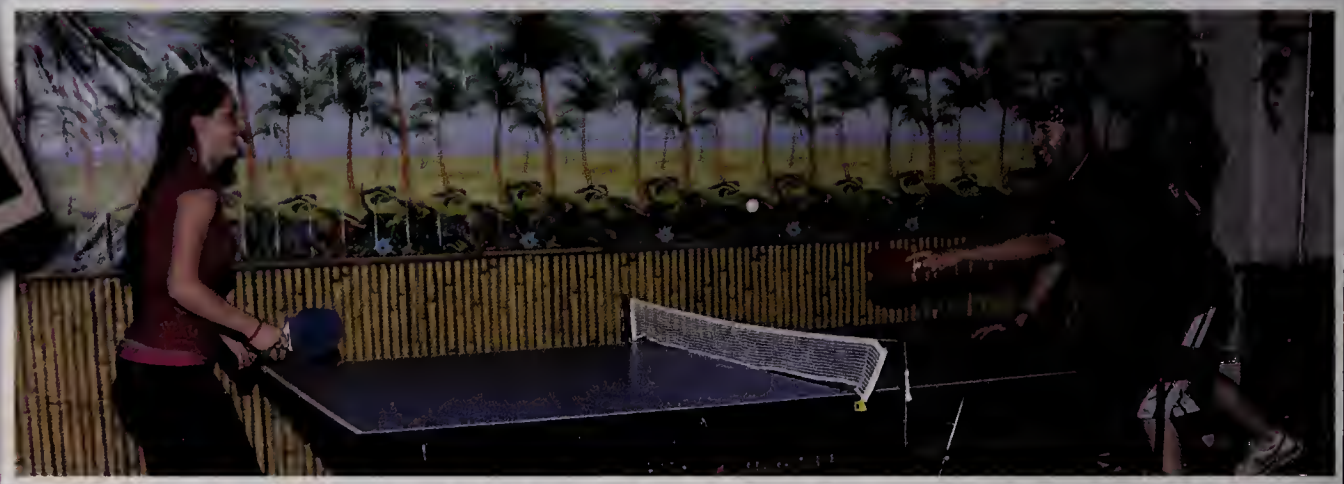

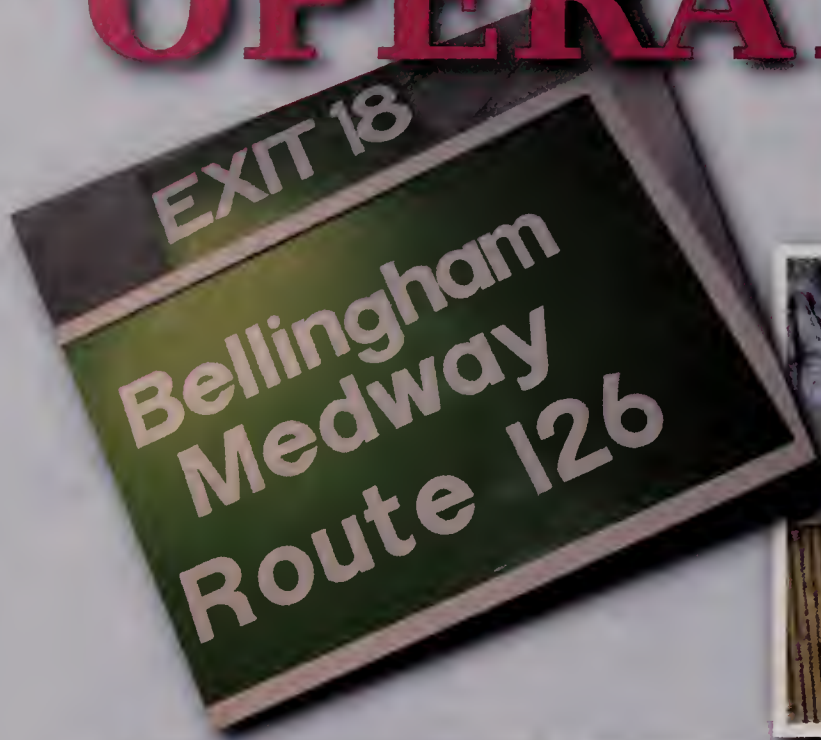

*In My Life
By The Beatles*

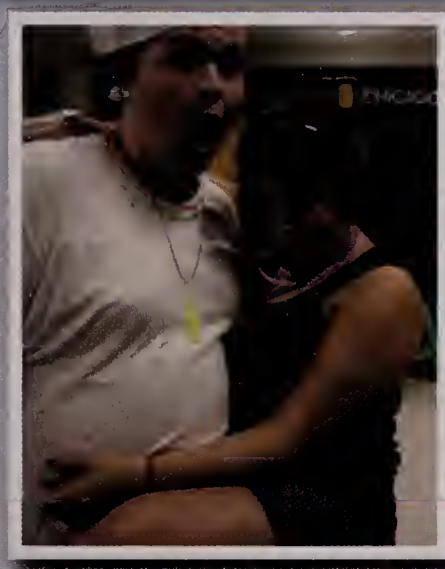

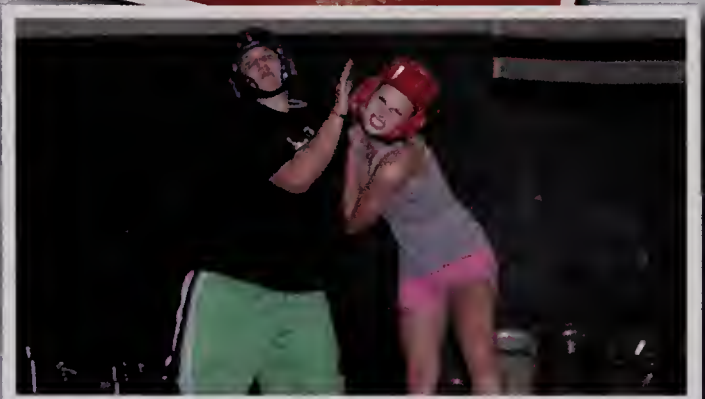

*There are places I'll remember
All my life though some have changed
Some forever not for better
Some have gone and some remain
All these places have their moments
With lovers and friends I still can recall
Some are dead and some are living
In my life I've loved them all*

*But of all these friends and lovers
There is no one compares with you
And these memories lose their meaning
When I think of love as something new
Though I know I'll never lose affection
For people and things that went before
I know I'll often stop and think about them
In my life I love you more*

*Though I know I'll never lose affection
For people and things that went before
I know I'll often stop and think about them
In my life I love you more
In my life I love you more*

H1N1 Sweeps the Nation

A young girl is shown receiving the nasal version of the H1N1 vaccine. Swine flu, also known as H1N1 influenza, killed 530 people in 28 states from Aug. 30 to Oct. 24, 2009, and accounted for 12,466 hospitalizations nationwide, according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC).

Across the nation people stood in lines to receive an H1N1 flu vaccine. Vaccines were first given to small children and high-risk individuals before being available to all Americans.

Taylor Swift Wins Best Female Video

Kanye West (L) jumps onstage after Taylor Swift (R) won the "Best Female Video" award during the 2009 MTV Video Music Awards on September 13th, 2009 in New York City. West prevented Swift from completing her acceptance speech by taking the microphone and announcing that Beyonce had the best video of all time.

After Beyonce won "Best Video of the Year", she graciously gave up her own acceptance speech and allowed Swift to finish hers.

President Barack Obama Receives Nobel Peace Prize

Nobel Peace Prize laureate, US President Barack Obama poses on the podium with his diploma and gold medal during the Nobel ceremony at the City Hall in Oslo on December 10, 2009. The Nobel committee said it honored Obama for his "extraordinary efforts to strengthen international diplomacy and cooperation between peoples." The Nobel committee recognized Obama's efforts at dialogue to solve complex global problems, including working toward a world free of nuclear weapons. "Only very rarely has a person to the same extent as Obama captured the world's attention and given its people hope for a better future," the committee said.

NASA Blows Up the Moon

NASA's Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter, or LRO, and the Lunar Crater Observation Sensing Satellite, or LCROSS, was launched at the moon on October 9 to map the Earth's moon and search for frozen water. NASA scientists anticipated the impact would knock enough dust and rock out of the lunar surface to form a cloud of debris that could be scanned for evidence of frozen water.
